GIVES CALHOUN MOST SEVERE ARRAIGNMENT

Attorney Henry in Prosecuting the San Francisco Graf, Case Bitterly Attacks Railway President—Says Every Hair in Head is Guilty and There is Enough Evidence to Send Him to the "Bottomless Pit of Hell".

San Francisco, June 18.—Francis J. Heney completed last night his closing argument for the prosecution in the case of Patrick Calhoun, charged with bribery.

During his address Mr. Heney admitted having an ambition to become district attorney under the new administration in San Francisco. He also outlined the theory of the prosecution designed to connect the president of the United Railroads with the accusation of bribery that has served as the basis of a five months' trial.

Mr. Heney declared the prosecution had no course open save to grant immunity to the supervisors, who gave the most direct testimony against the defendant.

"Isn't there enough here of evidence of guilt to send Patrick Calhoun to the bottomless pit of hell?" Heney asked.

"Every hair on his head is guilty. Caught in one crime, he has been back of a dozen more to prevent his conviction and obstruct the course of justice."

"A man will do much for his liberty, even to the commission of new crimes. And Patrick Calhoun is willing to pull down this government of which he boasts to be a stalwart supporter."

"I have purposely refrained during this trial from attempting to gain the friendship of any man on this jury. I have done nothing to curry your favor. But you have watched me all these weeks and you know what manner of man and what manner of prosecutor stands before you. You know whether or not I was justified in doing what I have done. Is there one among you who would have taken as much as I have taken? But I will never go into a court again as long as I live and allow any man to abuse me in the performance of a public duty, so help me God.

"What does it matter to me if I am abused by an attorney like Earl Rogers, the partner of the infamous Luther Brown?"

Reaching a discussion of the activities of William M. Abbott of the legal force of the United Railroads, Mr. Heney said:

"I am talking about William M. Abbott, than whom no misdeed villain ever cut a throat or scuttled a ship. In appearance a Sunday school superintendent, he is yet one of the men who was responsible for this record of black iniquity."

Referring to the relations of Abraham Ruef and Tiley L. Ford, general counsel for the United Railroads, Heney said:

"They have defied us to produce a witness who witnessed this bribery. 'Well, I will show you the man who saw Ford give this money, if he is here. His name is Tiley L. Ford and he is the man who saw his own hand pass this bribe money to Ruef.'"

On the subject of bossism, Mr. Heney said:

"The history of this country shows that the menace to our existence lies in the great cities where we foster the bosses, who are supported by two classes. One holds forth in the tenderloin where they want a permit to commit crimes."

"The other class holds forth in the fashionable neighborhoods and wants higher dividends from their investments in gas and railway and telephone stocks. They join hands with the tenderloin to accomplish their ends and that is what has made the boss possible."

SLAYER OF AN ACTRESS MAY GAIN HIS FREEDOM

Pennsylvania Board of Pardon Recommends That James B. Gentry, the Man Who Killed Madge Yorke, be Pardoned—Murderer Maintains That He Has no Recollection of Committing the Crime

Harrisburg, Pa., June 18.—James B. Gentry, an actor who narrowly escaped execution for the murder of Madge Yorke, the actress, may soon be a free man. The state board of pardons has recommended that the life prisoner be pardoned.

The murder of Madge Yorke, for which James B. Gentry was sentenced to be hanged and finally sent to prison for life, was committed on the afternoon of Feb. 17, 1895, in Philadelphia. Madge Yorke was playing with the "Baggage Check" company in that city. Gentry, who was killing an engagement in Boston had, his friends alleged, been seriously ill with the grip and was drinking heavily.

He had an engagement to meet Miss Yorke in New York early in February but through a misunderstanding he missed her at the railroad station. He met some friends, in New York and they jokingly told him that Miss Yorke was receiving the attentions of another actor. From that time all trace of Gentry was lost until he rushed into the room occupied by Miss Yorke at a Walnut street hotel and shot and killed the actress.

In his hurry to escape from the hotel Gentry fell from the fire escape fracturing two of his ribs. He made his way to Fairmount park, where for two days and nights, he slept and roamed through the woodland, in the bitter cold. Being unable to withstand the pangs of hunger and his terrible sufferings Gentry gave himself up to a park guard and was sent to a hospital. He was later sent to prison and finally convicted of murder in the first degree. He was sentenced to be hanged on April 22, 1897, but on the day preceding the date on which the sentence was to be carried out the board of pardons recommended that the sentence be commuted to life imprisonment.

Gov. Hastings carried out the recommendation of the board. Since then repeated efforts have been made to have the actor pardoned.

Gentry has always maintained that he has no recollection of the murder of Miss Yorke, that his mind was a blank until he found himself in a hospital in this city.
